When Abney spoke to me about the Dublin College of Science I could not say that I agreed with you & I dare not say anything much because I feel that I know too little and now I should be glad to know exactly why you think the chosen site a bad one. I haven't seen your article or lecture or paper on Tech. Education having been too awfully busy to hunt it up

All these matters are very important to me now because (who are, three of them, chief examiners) I + my assistants control so much of the S. & A. Examination system. But what's the use trying to induce you to come?

You will come just if you want to!

Yours

Also I want your advice about some stress + strain things

Finish this so

Believe me

Yours most sincerely
Cecil W. Peery

Hope you won't think me foolish for writing as I do in this week's 'Nature'

I wanted much to consult you, but by letter it is of no use. As chief examiner of the S + A. Dept. in Applied Mechanics & Steam with 28000 Candidates in A.M. alone every year, I need advice. Heretofore I have been a private person teaching as I please - how my pupils are Science Masters all over the country
There is another thing -

Dear Prof: Fitzgerald
Are you coming to London for the B.S. dinner on the 30th? If so will you give us the pleasure of a little visit. Could you come to us early on Sunday 29th and
stay until Wednesday?
I would like so much
to ask a few friends

To meet you here
at dinner on the Tuesday, if I can get them, at so
short a notice.

Please write at once
and say you will come. It is easy
getting here from Euston by ^{or better by Willesden} Ham either to Gloucester R. or South Kensington and then it takes about
less than quarter of an hour to walk to this house - ^{No end of omnibuses from S. K. Station} Euston R. - is

the outlet from the Bolton's to Fulham R.

We are comfortable
enough here; but as we have only got the house for the three and 4 years of a long lease, we do not look upon ourselves
as permanent fixtures
by any means, although I suppose we could easily get the house
for a longer time if we wanted it.

Jack is going to
