My dear Professor,

I venture to send you a copy of one of our recent issues of the Series "The Romance of Science."

It occurs to me that you might see your way to contribute a volume to the Series, on "The Modern Theory of Electricity," which you could doubtless make sufficiently popular to meet the purpose of this Series. The three recent articles on "Nature" on Hertz's Experiments, which seem to me to be your work - suggest the lines of such a book, allowing for the greater convenience of our clientele.

The book might be any number of pages from 128 to 224. I think you would find us liberal in payment. We should be prepared to pay a lump sum down for the copyright, or to do as we have done in the cases of Prof. Perry, Prof. Bury, Prof. Meldola & Capt. Abney, i.e. pay you a royalty of  $\frac{1}{6}$  the published price - before payment to be for 2000 copies on publication and the remainder as sold. A volume of 224
pp. would be sold at $\frac{2}{6}$ . We can afford to illustrate these volumes freely.

We could give you
six or eight months
for the preparation of the MS -

Yours sincerely
Edmund <sup>Seeley</sup> Wellesley
