Dear Professor Fitzgerald

By the time this letter reaches you, I hope you will have received a copy of the current "Contemporary Review" containing a paper of mine entitled "Man in the Light of Evolution" in which I venture to think you will be interested; though I cannot of course tell how far you may agree with the line of thought suggested. - The topic is far too large a one to be dealt with at all adequately in such a very short compass as I was compelled to be content with, and many points call loudly for further elucidation. This I hope to give in future papers, though I am afraid they will only appear at long intervals of time, owing to the great pressure which the editor seems to have on his space; but if you are interested in this one, I shall be pleased to send you the others as they come out. What you yourself said in a lecture which interested me exceedingly, and from which as you will see I have quoted one short passage, has made me think that your own conception of the relationship between Spirit and matter cannot be very widely different from the one I have tried to suggest, and this is the principal reason of my venturing to call your attention to the paper.—

I hope that you and Mr. Fitzgerald are well. Will you remember me very kindly to her &

Believe me to be

Yours very truly
